The Tribunal also authorized the submission by Panama of an additional pleading relating solely to the counterclaim submitted by Guinea-Bissau, and fixed 21 December 2012 as the time limit for the filing. Panama duly filed the additional pleading within that time limit.

49. By a further order, dated 24 April 2013, the Tribunal fixed 2 September 2013 as the date for the opening of the hearing.

50. The hearing took place from 2 to 6 September 2013, during which the parties presented their oral statements at eight public sittings. In accordance with article 75, paragraph 2, of the Rules, the parties presented the following final submissions in relation to the claim:

51. The Tribunal delivered its judgment in the case on 14 April 2014.

52. The facts of the case may be summarized as follows. The M/V Virginia G, an oil tanker flying the flag of Panama, was supplying gas oil to foreign vessels fishing in the exclusive economic zone of Guinea-Bissau when it was arrested on 21 August 2009 by the authorities of Guinea-Bissau for unauthorized sale of fuel. On 27 August 2009, the authorities of Guinea Bissau confiscated the vessel and the gas oil on board “for the repeated practice of fishing-related activities in the form of ‘unauthorized sale of fuel to ships fishing in [the] exclusive economic zone [of Guinea Bissau]’”. Subsequently, the vessel was released by decision of the authorities of Guinea-Bissau, which was notified to the shipowner on 6 October 2010.

53. In its judgment, the Tribunal found that it had jurisdiction over the dispute and rejected the objections raised by Guinea-Bissau to the admissibility of claims of Panama based on the alleged lack of genuine link between the Virginia G and Panama, the nationality of claims and the alleged failure to exhaust local remedies.

54. The main question examined by the Tribunal was whether Guinea-Bissau had violated the Convention when it arrested, and later confiscated, the Virginia G. In examining this question, the Tribunal clarified that its task was to deal with a dispute relating to bunkering activities in support of foreign vessels fishing in the exclusive economic zone of a coastal State. The Tribunal then addressed the specific issue of whether Guinea-Bissau, under the Convention, had jurisdiction to regulate bunkering of foreign vessels fishing in its exclusive economic zone. After analysing the relevant provisions of the Convention and the practice of States in that regard, the Tribunal expressed its view that “the regulation by a coastal State of bunkering of foreign vessels fishing in its exclusive economic zone is among those measures which the coastal State may take in its exclusive economic zone to conserve and manage its living resources under article 56 of the Convention, read together with article 62, paragraph 4, of the Convention” and noted that “[t]his view is confirmed by State practice which has developed after the adoption of the Convention” (see para. 217 of the judgment). The Tribunal thus concluded that “the bunkering of foreign vessels engaged in fishing in the exclusive economic zone is an activity which may be regulated by the coastal State concerned”, and that “[t]he coastal State, however, does not have such competence with regard to other bunkering activities, unless otherwise determined in accordance with the Convention” (see para. 223 of the judgment).

55. After deciding that the legislation of Guinea-Bissau concerning bunkering of fishing vessels was in conformity with articles 56 and 62, paragraph 4, of the Convention, the Tribunal turned its attention to the question of whether the application of the legislation of Guinea-Bissau in the case of the Virginia G had violated the Convention. In that regard, the Tribunal first established, on the basis of the evidence before it, that the Virginia G did not have the written authorization required by the legislation of Guinea-Bissau for bunkering. It then examined the sanctions provided for under the laws and regulations of Guinea-Bissau, observing that the legislation of that country contemplated the possibility of confiscating bunkering vessels. On that point, the Tribunal noted that, according to article 73, paragraph 1, of the Convention, the coastal State may take such measures “as may be necessary to ensure compliance with the laws and regulations adopted by it in conformity with this Convention”, adding that it was within the Tribunal’s competence to establish whether the legislation promulgated by Guinea-Bissau for the exclusive economic zone was in conformity with the Convention and whether the measures taken in implementing this legislation were necessary. In addition, the Tribunal stated that providing for the confiscation of a vessel offering bunkering services to foreign vessels fishing in the exclusive economic zone of Guinea-Bissau was not, per se, in violation of article 73, paragraph 1, of the Convention, and that whether or not confiscation was justified in a given case depended on the facts and circumstances of the case.

56. The Tribunal further examined whether the confiscation of the Virginia G and the gas oil on board was justified. On that matter, the Tribunal noted that article 73, paragraph 1, of the Convention referred to the right of coastal States to board, inspect and arrest the vessels concerned, and found therefore that neither the boarding and inspection nor the arrest of the Virginia G violated article 73, paragraph 1, of the Convention. It then reiterated that, pursuant to article 73, paragraph 1, of the Convention, the enforcement measures taken have to be “necessary” to ensure compliance with the laws and regulations adopted by the coastal State in conformity with the Convention. In that regard, after determining that the breach of the obligation to obtain written authorization for bunkering and to pay the prescribed fee was a serious violation, the Tribunal observed that the failure to obtain such authorization was rather the consequence of a misinterpretation of the correspondence between the representatives of the fishing vessels and the relevant authorities of Guinea-Bissau than an intentional violation of the national law of Guinea-Bissau. The Tribunal was of the view, in the light of the circumstances of the case, that the confiscation of the vessel and the gas oil on board was not necessary either to sanction the violation committed or to deter the vessels or their operators from repeating the violation. The Tribunal, therefore, found that the confiscation by Guinea-Bissau of the Virginia G and the gas oil on board was in violation of article 73, paragraph 1, of the Convention.

57. The Tribunal then addressed the allegations of Panama that Guinea-Bissau had violated article 73, paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, of the Convention. It considered that the applicable law of Guinea-Bissau concerning the prompt release of arrested fishing vessels and their crews upon the posting of a reasonable bond or other financial security was consistent with the provisions of article 73, paragraph 2, of the Convention, finding therefore that Guinea-Bissau did not violate article 73, paragraph 2, of the Convention. With regard to Panama’s allegation that, by de facto imprisoning the crew, Guinea-Bissau was in breach of article 73, paragraph 3, of the Convention, the Tribunal found that, in the case before it, there was no penalty of imprisonment imposed on members of the crew of the Virginia G and that Guinea-Bissau therefore did not violate article 73, paragraph 3, of the Convention. The Tribunal also found that, by failing to notify Panama as the flag State of the detention and arrest of the Virginia G and subsequent actions taken against the vessel and its cargo, Guinea-Bissau violated the requirements of article 73, paragraph 4, of the Convention and thus deprived Panama of its right as a flag State to intervene at the initial stages of actions taken against the Virginia G and during the subsequent proceedings.

58. The Tribunal dismissed the allegations made by Panama that Guinea-Bissau had violated the principles of articles 110, 224, 225 and 300 of the Convention and that Guinea-Bissau had used excessive force in boarding and arresting the vessel.

59. As regards the counterclaim of Guinea-Bissau based on the alleged violation by Panama of article 91 of the Convention, the Tribunal noted that a genuine link existed between Panama and the Virginia G at the time of the incident and, therefore, concluded that the counterclaim presented by Guinea-Bissau was unfounded.

60. In the light of its findings that Guinea-Bissau had violated article 73, paragraph 1, and article 73, paragraph 4, of the Convention, the Tribunal considered the issue of reparation due to Panama. In assessing the compensation claims made by Panama, the Tribunal found that only damages and losses related to the value of the gas oil confiscated and the cost of repairing the vessel were direct consequences of the illegal confiscation. It therefore decided to award Panama compensation as follows:

(a) Value of 532.2 tons of gas oil confiscated at a price of $730 per ton in the amount of $388,506.00; with interest at the rate of 2.862 per cent, compounded annually and payable from 20 November 2009 until the date of the judgment;

(b) Cost of repairs to the vessel in the amount of €146,080.80; with interest at the rate of 3.165 per cent, compounded annually and payable from 18 March 2011 until the date of the judgment.

B. Request for an advisory opinion submitted by the Sub-Regional Fisheries Commission (SRFC)

61. The Sub-Regional Fisheries Commission is a regional fisheries organization composed of seven member States: Cabo Verde, Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Mauritania, Senegal and Sierra Leone. During its fourteenth session (27-28 March 2013), the Conference of Ministers of the Sub-Regional Fisheries Commission adopted a resolution by which it decided, in accordance with article 33 of the Convention on the Determination of the Minimal Conditions for Access and Exploitation of Marine Resources within the Maritime Areas under Jurisdiction of the Member States of the Sub-Regional Fisheries Commission, of 2012, to authorize the Permanent Secretary of the Commission to seize the Tribunal in order to obtain its advisory opinion on the following matters:

(1) What are the obligations of the flag State in cases where illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities are conducted within the exclusive economic zone of third-party States?

(2) To what extent shall the flag State be held liable for illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities conducted by vessels sailing under its flag?

(3) Where a fishing licence is issued to a vessel within the framework of an international agreement with the flag State or with an international agency, shall the State or international agency be held liable for the violation of the fisheries legislation of the coastal State by the vessel in question?
